Gettysburg College Alumni Record.

A careful study just made of the alumni records of Gettysburg College has again emphasized the well known fact that Gettysburg College has turned out an unusually large number of men who have become prominent leaders. Besides the many names of Gettysburg divines that are household words among Lutherans everywhere we find the following men whose services to our commonwealths have been and are of the very highest order.

Conrad Baker, former Governor of Indiana.

Godlove S. Orth, former minister from United States to Austria.

Samuel D. Schmucker, Justice of the Maryland Supreme Court.

Harry M. Claybaugh, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Edgar Fahs Smith, Provost of the University of Pennsylvania.

Robert Weidmann, International Secretary of Y. M. C. A.

Following is a partial list setting forth the careers of former students of Gettysburg College:

Clergymen	No.	Per Ct.
Presidents of Theological Seminaries	10	655 41
Professors of Theological Seminaries	26	1.5
Presidents of General Synod and General Council	15
Bishops of the Episcopal Church	1
Secretaries of General Mission Boards	9
College Presidents	32	2
College Professors	107	6.7
Lawyers	196	12
Physicians	112	7
Journalists	87	5.4
Members of Congress	9
Members of State Legislatures	39
Bank Presidents	7
Railroad Presidents	2

Total number of graduates . . . 1600

The first six items explain in a measure the large religious influence that Gettysburg graduates have exerted. The college presidents item is certainly extraordinary. Two out of every one hundred graduates of Gettysburg College have become college presidents. Items nine and ten indicate that nineteen per cent have become highly trained professional men in law and medicine.

Building at Hoffman Orphanage.

The first of a group of buildings to be erected for the Hoffman Industrial Orphanage, near Two Taverns, Adams county, is about completed and will soon be ready for occupancy. It will accommodate 25 children and will soon be filled from the 30 or more applicants on the waiting list.

The structure cost about $7,000, and has been erected by John Eline, contractor, of Littlestown. Other cottages will be erected as fast as funds are available until the entire group, provided for in the plans of architect M. I. Kaet, is completed.

The plans call for eight cottages, schools, hospital, chapel, service building and heating plant, to be grouped in the form of an oval, with the hospital and chapel at one end. The orphanage is under the care and control of the Potomac Synod of the Reformed church, and is known as the George W. and Agnes Hoffman Orphanage.

George W. Hoffman, an elder in the Reformed church, who died in January, 1909, gave all his real estate and a large amount of personal property to the church for the orphanage, which is managed by a board.

Rev. J. Stewart Hartman, formerly of Silver Run, is superintendent of the home, and is directing the improvements.

L. M. Buehler Successful.

After a great deal of effort and correspondence L. M. Buehler the popular druggist has succeeded in getting the Dr. Howard Co. in making special half price introductory offer on the regular fifty cent size of their celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia.

This medicine is a recent discovery for the cure of all diseases of the stomach and bowels. It not only gives quick relief, but makes permanent cures.

Headaches, coated tongue, dizziness, gas on stomach, specks before the eyes, constipation, and all forms of liver and stomach trouble are soon cured by this scientific medicine.

No great demand for this specific that L. M. Buehler has been able to secure only a limited supply, and every one who is troubled with dyspepsia, constipation or liver trouble should call upon him at once, or send 25 cents, and get sixty doses of the best medicine ever made, on this special half price offer with his personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

Gettysburg's Population Over 4,000

The Census Bureau made public last week the population of Gettysburg according to the census enumeration taken last year. Gettysburg has substantially grown to a population of 4,060. The census of 1900 gave a population 3,495 and of 1890 3,221, the increase in the past ten years being 535, an increase more than doubling that of the preceding ten years which had been 274.

An Old Peach Tree.

Peter Brown of Reading township, recently cut down an old peach tree which he planted 23 years ago. For the last twenty years it has been bearing from two to seven bushels of fine Crawford late peaches but the last year it had only a few small ones. The tree was 25 feet high and 3 feet in circumference. He kept the tree in a good healthy condition by occasionally putting salt to the roots.

News of the Churches.

There will be preaching in Coneyago Presbyterian Church next Sabbath. The communion service will be observed on Jan. 29th, and the rite of Baptism will then be administered.

HOME SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

MATTERS OF PHYSICAL TRAINING AND RECESS PRESENTED.

Equipped Play-Grounds Needed by Town and Committee Appointed for that Purpose.

The Home and School Association met in the High School building on last Friday evening, being called to order by the president, Mrs. L. Dow Ott. Minutes of previous meeting was read by the secretary, Miss Lizzie Rummel, as also communications from the State president and secretary. Inquiry being made as to the amount of annual dues intended to be fixed, a number present indicated their understanding to have been ten cents a year for the local organization and ten cents a year to be divided between the state and national organization and this rate of twenty cents a year will be the amount that will be collected from every member and the membership is open to every citizen of the borough. By sending names to president or secretary is all that is needed to make any one a member.

Report was made of visits to the school by members of the visiting committee and entertainment part of program was presented, consisting of a piano duet by Edna Zinkand and Ruth Bender, a recitation, "Papa and the Boy," by Lillian Kitzmiller, a piano solo by Helen Pfeiffer, and Mrs. Roy E. Zinn sang "Little Boy Blue." Earl Diehl playing the accompaniment. "Home Study" was discussed by Mrs. E. M. Bender, Mrs. R. C. Miller, Mrs. E. J. Pfeiffer, Prof. W. A. Burgoon, R. K. Major and Calvin Hamilton, all speaking in favor of home study, except the last speaker who was of the opinion that it would depend upon the age of the child, that it should not be necessary for the very young children to study at home.

In a brief talk Wm. Arch. McClean took up the question of what the schools are doing for the health of the children and presented the following facts as to the schools: In the high school there was physical culture of training. In the schools in the Meade building and on High street there was a small amount of training. Several times a day the scholars changed their positions by standing, going through some movements of legs and arms; some breathing drills and the windows would be raised and the scholars would march about the rooms.

In the matter of recess, the High street building had a 15 minute recess in the morning and one of similar length in the afternoon, and that there was no recess at the Meade building. That in lieu of the same these two schools were adjourned at least fifteen minutes ahead of time. The speaker asked the association whether there wasn't a work to do in bringing about school periods with a morning and afternoon recess and whether our schools should not give the children more physical training. Attention was called to the fact that the best recitations of the day are given after recess, when scholars have had the opportunity to breathe into their lungs fresh air and whether any arrangement that got rid of recess was not detrimental to the health of the child and the efficiency of the school.

Then the matter of play-grounds was taken up and assertion made that Gettysburg had nothing that deserved the name play-ground and that at the rate the town was developing there would soon be no available ground for the children for a play-ground. Attention was called to the fact that the woman who came to the town to organize this association had stated that in many communities the work of Parent and Teachers' Association had been to establish equipped play-grounds and the work needed in Gettysburg was to find play-grounds and then see whether they could be rented or bought and how much the School Board would contribute to the same. The association should find out next what an equipped play-ground was and the cost of equipment and the result must be happy children with healthy minds in healthy bodies.

Calvin Hamilton and Prof. W. A. Burgoon briefly spoke favoring the suggestions of Mr. McClean and a motion that a committee be appointed to take up matter of securing play-grounds was unanimously carried and Wm. Arch. McClean, C. A. Blocher and Calvin Hamilton were appointed as the committee by the president.

Fox Climbs a Tree.

That a gray fox will climb a tree was proven last week when George Snyder and Elmer Yeagy tracked a gray fox to its lair in a large tree on Bonners' Hill. A long ladder was secured and Reynard was taken out alive from the nest 23 feet from the ground. A chase was held and the fox took to the hill and after baffling the hounds for a couple of hours ran down to Peter Leer's woods when it was captured on a large tree where it had taken refuge from the dogs. Harland Davis secured the brush.

Union Wins Injunction Case.

In July, 1909, a number of cigar manufacturers in Pennsylvania and a few of their employees organized the Universal Cigar Makers' and Packers' Union, with headquarters at Hanover. After receiving a charter, they started issuing a label which G. W. Perkins, president of the Cigarmakers' International Union, immediately declared was an imitation of the Union Blue Label of the Cigarmakers' International Union; and Mr. Perkins says, "consequently a fraud and an attempt to deceive dealers and consumers."

Large numbers of cigars bearing these labels were shipped all over the country.

President Perkins took the matter in hand personally and instructed L. E. Kuhn, McSherrystown, to get the necessary evidence upon which to base a cause for action against these people, in the courts. Union No. 316, of McSherrystown, furnished considerable valuable evidence in the case. Jere S. Black, Esq., of York, represented the Cigarmakers' International Union.

Judge Wanner, in granting a permanent injunction on Saturday restraining further use of this imitation label, ordered the engravings and labels turned over to the officers of the International Union.

The following parties were informed, were interested in the organization, known as the Universal Union: E. J. Fink, O. M. Dubs, J. M. Marshall, Geo. W. Lawson, officers and manufacturers; S. L. Johns, dealer and shipper, and in whose interests, it is alleged, some of the factories were conducted. Wm. Brandsteadter, who acted as agent, in procuring the printing of the labels. Also Harry Snyder, V. J. Eckenrode and F. J. Sneringer, manufacturers at Two Taverns, Adams Co., Pa., and Haney and Emmitsburg, Md., respectively.

Deputy Sheriffs it is said, served the injunction and turned the labels and engravings over to representatives of the International Union.

Pass big Pension Bill

Under suspension of the rules requiring a two-thirds vote for its adoption, but without the formality of a roll call vote, the House of Representatives last week passed the Sulloway bill increasing the "age pensions" granted to soldiers of the Civil and Mexican wars.

It is estimated that the annual cost of carrying out the bill will be $45,489,468.

Speaker Cannon left his seat on the rostrum, and from the center of the republican side made an appeal to the House to pass the bill. At the conclusion of his speech, the bill was passed by a viva voce vote of 212 to 62. The yeas were divided among the Republicans and Democrats. It was not made a strict party bill by either party and was supported from both sides.

Under this bill as passed any person who served 90 days in the Civil War or 60 days in the Mexican War and was honorably discharged, will be put on the pension roll and pensioned as follows:

When 62 yrs. old or over, $15 a mo.
When 65 yrs. or over, $20 a mo.
When 70 yrs. or over, $25 a mo.
When 75 yrs. or over, $36 a mo.

Under existing law such soldiers receive $12 a month when 62 years or over, $15 when 70 or over and $20 a month when 75 years or over.

Cockran Urged To Taft.

The committee of the York Bar association, headed by Judge N. M. Wanner, met President Taft in Washington last week and urged the appointment of Hon. Richard E. Cockran to the office of judge of the United States court for the middle district of Pennsylvania. They also met Senators Penrose and Oliver, to whom the committee presented the request for Mr. Cockran's appointment. The Adams County Bar had recently unanimously passed resolutions in favor of the appointment of Mr. Cockran.

The York party was composed of Judge N. M. Wanner, James G. Glessner, N. Sargent Ross and A. C. Wiest. Upon arriving in Washington they were met by Congressman D. F. Lafean, who accompanied them to the White House and introduced them to President Taft, an appointment having been made with the President by Mr. Lafean. The President received the committee graciously and manifested much interest in what the gentlemen had to say about the appointment to the judgeship. He made numerous inquiries about Mr. Cockran and declared that he would give the matter careful consideration, and that he is anxious to make an appointment which shall be acceptable to the bar and to the people generally in the district concerned.

The Lincoln Way

Congressman D. F. Lafean, introduced into the House of Representatives, a bill providing for the construction of the Lincoln Way between Washington and Gettysburg. The bill provides for a road 200 feet wide and its cost is not to exceed $3,000,000, and to be a National tribute of affection to Abraham Lincoln. The road would have an appropriate architectural entrance in Washington and at Gettysburg and the president is authorized to appoint a commission to have charge of the construction.

Senator Oliver has agreed to introduce the same bill into the Senate.

Another project for a $2,000,000 monument may block the success of the Lincoln Way for a time but we are trusting the ultimate sense of the American people that no monument could ever adequately express the American estimate of Lincoln. A monument would be simply doing the same old thing in the same old way and if made more massive than all other memorials would only be more offensive. If Congress would only take time to think and get out of their heads improvement plans of Washington they must realize that the only fitting memorial would be the Lincoln Way. Keeping green the memory of the great Lincoln as long as our hills and valleys last.

Drop in Produce.

From Chicago comes the story of a big drop in sight in country produce, butter, eggs, cheese and poultry. Thousands of tons of produce have been put in cold storage during the past five years in the effort to force up the prices and keep them up. But things have been going wrong with the cold storage people. They must raise cash and the only way in sight is to get rid of their cold storage supplies. It is said that one firm controlling 44,000,000 pounds of butter in 32 warehouses will sell the entire stock before May 1. The situation in the egg, cheese and poultry market is almost as aggravated as that in the butter market. It is believed many firms will sell their cold storage stock at a loss which will result in a number of failures and that the falling prices of the cold storage products will have a tendency to keep down the prices of the new supply. The prediction is made that prices will go many cents below what has been the prevailing prices for months.

Delightful College Dance.

The Fraternities of Gettysburg College on Tuesday evening of last week gave a delightful dance in Recitation Hall. It was the first dance ever given in a College building and a new floor had been put down in the Hall specially made for dancing. The new order of things of having dances in College building under supervision of College authorities is proving a most delightful innovation and one most conducive to social good order. It is recognized by every one that it is the right way. The hall was tastefully decorated with bunting and with the many handsome gowns displayed presented a very charming scene. The College Orchestra furnished the music, which was remarked by every one as in every way equal to any music ever given here at a similar function.

Oldest Skater in State.

York Springs lays claim to the oldest skater in the State of Pennsylvania in the person of Rev. L. M. Gardner who is now in his 80th year. Last week Mr. Gardner was out with the young people on Meadow Hill Lake and to see him cut out with his old fashioned curled skates and glide gracefully over the smooth surface you would imagine that he had found the fabled fountain of perpetual youth.

The I. O. O. F., of this place will run an excursion to Baltimore on Thursday, Jan. 26. The train will leave Gettysburg at 7.15 a. m., and return train will leave Baltimore at 11.30 p. m.

THE LIQUOR LICENSE COURT

CONDITION ATTACHED TO THE GRANTING OF APPLICATIONS.

No Public Card Playing to be Allowed—Revocation if Room for that Purpose be Provided.

The annual liquor license court was held on last Friday. There were 37 applications for places that have been licensed. There were no new applications. No remonstrances or objections of any kind had been filed and the work of the court consisted in examining the applications and bonds formally entering the decree of license granted and bond approved.

In the application of Lewis Culp of McSherrystown, the court recalled a letter sent by the constable at the November court complaining that Mr. Culp allowed cards to be played in his hotel for the drinks. The court had directed the district attorney to discover whether the writer of the letter had personal knowledge of the matter and the district attorney had received a letter from the woman saying that she had not seen the card playing, but that her husband had told her about it. Mr. Culp when questioned said he had had an unpleasant occurrence with the man and while he admitted that card playing was allowed in a public room he denied that it was allowed for the drinks. The license was granted to Mr. Culp on the condition that he would not permit public card playing at his hotel.

The court said this condition was not only applicable to Mr. Culp but to every one to whom a license was granted, that public card playing would be a good reason for the revocation of a license, that it encouraged evils the proprietor should avoid, that this prohibition referred to public rooms maintained by the proprietor for card playing but did not apply to guests playing in their rooms without the knowledge and consent of the proprietor.

CROSSING OVER THE BAR

EX-STATE SENATOR ALEXANDER STEWART PASSES AWAY.

Wm. O. Bishop, a Native of County and Prominent Business Man of Harrisburg.

EX-STATE SENATOR ALEXANDER STEWART, long prominent in the affairs of Franklin county, member of a distinguished family and active for years in the fight against Quay-Penrose domination of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, and well known to many Adams county people, died in his 68th year last Thursday at Chambersburg. He had been in failing health for several years. Two brothers, Justice John Stewart, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and George H. Stewart of Shippensburg, and a sister, Mrs. John Craig of Reading, survive him. Mrs. Stewart died in 1897. They had no children. When John Stewart led the independent fight in the gubernatorial campaign in 1882, Alexander Stewart was one of his advisers, and from that time continued active in the anti-machine movement. Alexander Stewart became the leader of the anti-Quay forces in the county, and the Republican county organization was turned against the state boss. After serving as Republican county chairman from 1897 to 1899, he was elected state senator in 1899 from the old Franklin-Huntington district without opposition from any candidate of any party. His second election was in 1904 and when Adams and Franklin were formed into a senatorial district he finished his term as representing this district. In the legislature of 1901 Senator Stewart opposed the election of Quay as United States senator, and throughout his period of service at Harrisburg he allied himself with the independent forces. The Quaysites wasted much effort in trying to bring him over to their side. When his second term in the senate expired, he declined to be a candidate again. Falling health caused him to withdraw from active politics, but his counsel continued to be much sought. Senator Stewart came from Scotch-Irish stock and was born in Shippensburg, September 17, 1843. When only 17 years old he enlisted in Company D, 150th Pennsylvania Volunteers. Later he joined the 201st Pennsylvania Volunteers, and he was mustered out in 1865 as first lieutenant in command of Company K of that regiment. After the war he went west and engaged in hauling freight by wagon from Omaha to Denver. His first trip of this kind was undertaken alone and without experience, and after an adventurous journey he got his team safely over the Indian-infested plains. The freightage at that time was worth 25 cents a pound. Later with a partner, he drove horses east through the Indian country. Brushes with the Indians were numerous, and one day his partner, who had ventured too far from the wagon train, was driven in with several arrows sticking in his back. Returning to Franklin county, Senator Stewart took up the grain business at Scotland. He remained there until a few years ago, when he moved to Chambersburg to live in retirement.

WILLIAM O. BISHOP, aged 67 years, of Harrisburg, prominent in local Masonic circles and one of that city's leading manufacturers and business men, died last Thursday of a complication of diseases. He had been confined to the house since last August. He was a native of Adams county. Mr. Bishop is survived by his widow and the following children: Dr. A. L. Bishop of Philadelphia, Mrs. A. S. Dellinger, Mrs. C. W. Burtlett and W. H. Bishop of Harrisburg; one sister, Mrs. William Yount, of Littlestown, Adams county, also survives. Mr. Bishop was a veteran of the Civil War. He was a member of Post 116, Grand Army of the Republic. He also belonged to Perseverance Lodge, No. 2, Free and Accepted Masons; Pilgrim Commandery, No. 11, Knights Templar, and Zumbo Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He was a director in the following companies: Central Trust Company, Merchants' National Bank, Harrisburg Light, Heat and Power Company and Harrisburg Steam Heat Company, and was vice-president of the Blough Manufacturing Company. He was a member of the famous old City Grays in the early eighties, a real estate man of wide reputation and one of the pioneer merchants of the West End, where he held the foundation of his business success. For many years he conducted a large dry goods store on Verbeke street, which was largely patronized by the farmers of Dauphin county. He retired from that business some years ago to give his attention to his growing out side interests. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon being held in the Harrisburg cemetery.

JOSEPH ALABRIGHT, who resided with his son, William Albright, near New Oxford, died last Thursday at the York hospital from pneumonia and infirmities of old age. Mr. Albright had been visiting his children in York and was taken sick at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry A. Doll. He had been a patient in the hospital four weeks. Mr. Albright was born and reared in Hampton. During his younger days he was a butcher by occupation. He was aged 80 years, and is survived by nine children as follows: William C. Albright of West Manchester township York county, Henry Albright of Gettysburg, Josiah Albright of Hampton, John Albright of York, Mrs. Joseph Stambaugh of East Berlin Junction, Mrs. Daniel Pressel of Abbotstown, Mrs. Henry A. Doll and Mrs. Henry Holland of York. A step-sister, Mrs. Hoff, also survives. The funeral was held on Sunday and interment was made at the Hampton cemetery.

OSCAR S. CHRONISTER died at his home in York Monday, Jan. 9, of pneumonia, aged 59 years, 4 months and 21 days. Besides his widow, Mrs. Hannah A. Chronister, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Harry Reinicker of Washington township, York county, Mrs. Robert Mummert of York, Mrs. M. L. Frey, who lived with her parents, four sisters, Mrs. Eliza Sidenstricker of Mt. Zion, Mrs. William Fiesel of near Hampton, Mrs. David F. Nisley of Columbus, Ohio, Mrs. Oliver

Gerber of Hampton and three brothers, Benjamin, Jeremiah and Moses of York. Funeral last Thursday, Jan. 12, interment in Greenmount cemetery, York.

Mrs. MARY ANN MUMMERT, wife of Rev. Moses Mummert, died Tuesday, Jan. 10, at her home in Jackson township, York county, near Pleasant Hill Meeting House, aged 64 years, 5 months and 2 days. Mrs. Mummert was highly respected; a kind and loving wife and mother, and was cherished by all who knew her. The deceased was a daughter of the late Josiah Hoover, of the same place, and was united in marriage about 40 years ago to the Rev. CROSSING OVER THE BAR

EX-STATE SENATOR ALEXANDER STEWART PASSES AWAY.

Wm. O. Bishop, a Native of County and Prominent Business Man of Harrisburg.

EX-STATE SENATOR ALEXANDER STEWART, long prominent in the affairs of Franklin county, member of a distinguished family and active for years in the fight against Quay-Penrose domination of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, and well known to many Adams county people, died in his 68th year last Thursday at Chambersburg. He had been in failing health for several years. Two brothers, Justice John Stewart, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and George H. Stewart of Shippensburg, and a sister, Mrs. John Craig of Reading, survive him. Mrs. Stewart died in 1897. They had no children. When John Stewart led the independent fight in the gubernatorial campaign in 1882, Alexander Stewart was one of his advisers, and from that time continued active in the anti-machine movement. Alexander Stewart became the leader of the anti-Quay forces in the county, and the Republican county organization was turned against the state boss. After serving as Republican county chairman from 1897 to 1899, he was elected state senator in 1890 from the old Franklin-Huntington district without opposition from any candidate of any party. His second election was in 1904 and when Adams and Franklin were formed into a senatorial district he finished his term as representing this district. In the legislature of 1901 Senator Stewart opposed the election of Quay as United States senator, and throughout his period of service at Harrisburg he allied himself with the independent forces. The Quaysites wasted much effort in trying to bring him over to their side. When his second term in the senate expired, he declined to be a candidate again. Failing health caused him to withdraw from active politics, but his counsel continued to be much sought. Senator Stewart came from Scotch-Irish stock and was born in Shippensburg, September 17, 1843. When only 17 years old he enlisted in Company D, 150th Pennsylvania Volunteers. Later he joined the 201st Pennsylvania Volunteers, and he was mustered out in 1865 as first lieutenant in command of Company K of that regiment. After the war he went west and engaged in hauling freight by wagon from Omaha to Denver. His first trip of this kind was undertaken alone and without experience, and after an adventurous journey he got his team safely over the Indian-infested plains. The freightage at that time was worth 20 cents a pound. Later with a partner, he drove horses east through the Indian country. Brushes with the Indians were numerous, and one day his partner, who had ventured too far from the wagon train, was driven in with several arrows sticking in his back. Returning to Franklin county, Senator Stewart took up the grain business at Scotland. He remained there until a few years ago, when he moved to Chambersburg to live in retirement.

WILLIAM O. BISHOP, aged 67 years, of Harrisburg, prominent in local Masonic circles and one of that city's leading manufacturers and business men, died last Thursday of a complication of diseases. He had been confined to the house since last August. He was a native of Adams county. Mr. Bishop is survived by his widow and the following children: Dr. A. L. Bishop of Philadelphia, Mrs. A. S. Delinger, Mrs. C. W. Burmett and W. H. Bishop of Harrisburg; one sister, Mrs. William Yount of Littlestown, Adams county, also survives. Mr. Bishop was a veteran of the Civil War. He was a member of Post 116, Grand Army of the Republic. He also belonged to Perseverance Lodge, No. 2, Free and Accepted Masons; Pilgrim Commandery, No. 11, Knights Templar, and Zembo Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He was a director in the following companies: Central Trust Company, Merchants' National Bank, Harrisburg Light, Heat and Power Company and Harrisburg Steam Heat Company, and was vice-president of the Blough Manufacturing Company. He was a member of the famous old City Grays in the early eighties, a real estate man of wide reputation and one of the pioneer merchants of the West End, where he laid the foundation of his business success. For many years he conducted a large dry goods store on Verbeke street, which was largely patronized by the farmers of Dauphin county. He retired from that business some years ago to give his attention to his growing out side interests. The funeral was held on Monday interment being made in the Harrisburg cemetery.

JOSIAH ALBRIGHT, who resided with his son, William Albright, near New Oxford, died last Thursday at the York hospital from pneumonia and infirmities of old age. Mr. Albright had been visiting his children in York and was taken sick at the home of his daughter Mrs. Henry A. Doll. He had been a patient in the hospital four weeks. Mr. Albright was born and reared in Hampton. During his younger days he was a butcher by occupation. He was aged 80 years, and is survived by nine children as follows: William C. Albright of West Manchester township York county, Henry Albright of Gettysburg, Josiah Albright of Hampton, John Albright of York, Mrs. Joseph Strausbaugh of East Berlin Junction, Mrs. Daniel Pressel of Abbottstown, Mrs. Henry A. Doll and Mrs. Henry Holland of York. A step-sister, Mrs. Hoff, also survives. The funeral was held on Sunday and interment was made at the Hampton cemetery.

CHARLES S. CHRONISTER died at his home in York Monday, Jan. 9, of pneumonia, aged 59 years, 4 months and 21 days. Besides his widow, Mrs. Hannah A. Chronister, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Harry Reinecker of Washington township, York county, Mrs. Robert Mummert of York, Mrs. M. L. Frey, who lived with her parents, four sisters, Mrs. Eliza Sidenstricker of Mt. Zion, Mrs. William Fisel of near Hampton, Mrs. David F. Nickey of Columbus, Ohio, Mrs. Oliver

Gerber of Hampton and three brothers, Benjamin, Jeremiah and Moses of York. Funeral last Thursday, Jan. 12, interment in Greenmount cemetery, York.

Report of Board of Health for 1910.

In accordance with the requirements of the law the following report of the Board of Health during the year 1910 has been submitted to the Town Council of Gettysburg by Dr. Henry Stewart, Secretary of the Board of Health; January 10, 1911.

The Borough Council, Gettysburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—
In accordance with the requirements of the Act of Assembly, I submit the following report of the operations of the Board of Health during the year 1910.

NUISANCES.

Ten complaints were laid before the Board, of which one was found on inspection to be without foundation.

Of the remaining nine, seven were abated upon notification.

In one case, we had to serve the formal notice of prosecution, to secure its abatement.

In the remaining case after abundant notice, and every allowance made for getting work done (during the military encampments last summer) the Board intervened and had the work done—after which we were compelled to enter suit for the cost of the work. Judgment has been obtained, upon which the bill will be collected, if not satisfied on the 23rd of this month.

MORBIDITY STATISTICS.

The following cases were reported:

Diphtheria	7
Typhoid fever	9
Pneumonia	5
Mumps	5
Whooping Cough	3
Chicken Pox	2
Erysipelas	2
Malarial Fever	1
Tubercular meningitis	1
Total	35

Deaths—From diphtheria 3; Tubercular Meningitis 1; total 4.

This is a truly remarkable record for a town of this size. Measles is again conspicuous by its total absence. It is hoped that when it does reappear we will have the co-operation of the public, in willingly isolating cases, and by this means preventing its spreading in future years. It is the intention of the Board to put forth every effort to have the law regarding the minor diseases fully enforced. As a preliminary, we have published a warning as to the liability of householders. While this is not legally necessary, it was done so that no one will have the excuse of ignorance of the requirements of the law.

The outbreak of diphtheria, undoubtedly imported, with its unfortunately high mortality, was the only serious feature of the year's work.

Typhoid fever, while showing a slightly higher than usual number of cases, cannot be said to have been epidemic at any time, as the cases occurred scattered through the whole year.

VITAL STATISTICS.

Jan. 3, Feb. 3, Mar. 3, Apr. 7, May 2, June 4, July 4, Aug. 5, Sept. 4, Oct. 6, Nov. 3, Dec. 4. Total 44—40 white, 4 black.

Including 2 still births not tabulated, the total of 46 is exactly identical with those of last year.

Excluding one non-resident, the total of 43 deaths, gives a death rate of 10.67 per thousand—using the published population under the census of 1910, 4050.

DEATHS BY AGE PERIODS.

Under 1: 8; 1-4: 1; 5-9: 2; 10-19: 2; 20-29: 2; 30-39: 1; 40-49: 3; 50-59: 9; 70 and over 16. Total 44.

This is a repetition, in a still more marked degree of the conditions shown last year.

CAUSES OF DEATH.

Brain and nervous system, apoplexy	9
Abdominal organs, cirrhosis of liver	1
Cancer of liver	1
Cancer of stomach	2
Infantile conditions, marasmus	3
Enteritis	1
Tubercular meningitis	2
Unknown	1
Incident to child birth	1
Diseases of heart, valvular	3
Endocarditis	1
Respiratory system, catarrhal pneumonia	1
Hypostatic pneumonia	1
Hypostatic congestion	1
Influenza	1
Tuberculosis	1
Urinary organs, chronic Bright's disease	1
Constitutional diseases, pernicious anemia	1
Accident, drowning	1

Scalds	1
Diphtheria	1

Jan. 11, Feb. 2, Mar. 6, Apr. 8, May 4, June 8, July 10, Aug. 10, Sept. 6, Oct. 4, Nov. 2, Dec. 5. Total 79—47 male, 32 female; white 75, black 4.

A birth rate of 19.6 per thousand. Very respectfully submitted,

Horse Dies at the Chase.

After following the hounds for a period of seventeen years and earning his master many a trophy, a horse belonging to Charles J. Griest of York Springs, ended its career last week when he fell over dead in the fox chase. After the fox chase was held several weeks before the animal was wild to get out and Mr. Griest rode him in the chase. Mr. Griest again followed the hounds in the short chase riding in a leisurely manner and when nearing the end of the hunt the animal dropped over dead.

AMATEUR STRATEGY

By TEMPLE BAILEY
(Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.)

Perceval's den in Berkeley hall was hung with the usual conglomerate collection of trifles on which college youths pride themselves. Strangely enough, however, though otherwise complete, it lacked one of the essentials—indeed, a vital essential—of a student's room decorations. There were no photographs.

The other fellows had pictures of girls in evening gowns, girls in street costume, girls in golf garb, girls on horseback, girls afoot—always girls. But not a girl's picture adorned Perceval's den except one lonely small miniature, and that stood far withdrawn, hidden on the back of his desk.

Randolph Chase hauled it out on one occasion before Perceval could reach him with a detaining hand.

"What a queer little girl!" Randolph said.

"Put it back," Perceval said shortly, his face aflame.

But the other fellows crowded behind Randolph and looked at the picture over his shoulder.

"Such a mop of hair and such a little face!" said one of them.

"Put it back!" Perceval's tone rasped with irritation. "Put it back, Randolph!"

Randolph, after one glance at the younger man's countenance, set the miniature back on the desk hastily. "Oh, if you feel that way about it," he apologized.

But the next night when he was alone with Perceval he said: "I don't want to be inquisitive, but I was awfully interested in that girl's face. Who is she?"

Perceval was standing at the window, looking out upon the elm bordered street, where the big electric lights cast great shadows.

"That," he said without looking around—"that girl, as you call her, is Mrs. Perceval Moore."

"What?" Randolph's tone expressed extreme incredulity. "You surely don't mean?"

Perceval whirled around. "That I am married? Yes."

Randolph whistled. "Well, of all things!" he said. And after that there was silence.

Then Perceval came over and flung himself into a chair opposite Randolph. "I've simply got to tell somebody, Chase," he said. "I'm in an awful fix, and she's the dearest and truest and best little thing in the world."

Randolph reached over and picked up the miniature again. "She truly looks it," he said after he had studied it for a long time.

Perceval choked a little before he answered. "She's an angel, Randolph."

"Then what's the matter?" Randolph questioned.

Perceval leaned forward.

"I've deceived her. She doesn't know that I am in college. She thinks I am earning a good salary in business."

"Well, son," said Randolph Chase. "It seems to me that sort of deception is a kind that a girl can forgive easily enough. I guess she won't be wildly indignant when she finds that next year—it is next year that you come of age, isn't it?—you'll have a big pile of money coming to you. Any girl would be tickled to death to find that."

Perceval shook his head. "Not Annabel," he declared. "Isn't her name dear and old fashioned, Chase?"

"Yes," Randolph agreed. "But why will she object to a million, Perceval?"

"Because she will say that I lied to her," Perceval said slowly, "and Annabel can forgive anything but a lie."

"Our with it," Randolph probed. "Tell me the whole story. It must be a queer one, and if you don't mind my saying so, old man, she must be a queer girl."

"That's just what she is," said Perceval. "I met her last year at the beach. She was such a quaint, queer little thing that she attracted me. She always wore white, and I would find her sitting on the sand singing little songs to herself. There was an old sea captain to whom she talked a good deal, and I got him to introduce us."

"Well, she had read a lot of books on social equality, and she just simply didn't have any use for the gilded youth with money. What Annabel wanted was a man who worked, preferably with his hands, but, failing that, one who lived in the thick of the fight for existence. And she meant it too. And that is where I fell."

"I was head over heels in love with her," continued Perceval fervently. "and I simply wouldn't let her go. So I let her believe that I was working my way up in business. The first lie was simple enough and looked like one of those things that could be squared easily enough afterward. But, oh, Chase! I had to back that lie up with details on details until I had lied to her at least ten lies to the hour. Well, we were married before I left in the fall. I wasn't of age, and she wasn't, and she wouldn't leave home until I could support her without hampering my business career."

"I knew I had to come back to college or get dad down on me, so I told her to stay," groaned Perceval. "But I made her marry me for fear something might come between us, and I couldn't stand that, Randolph. But think how I'll appear to her, for I've lied in every letter, telling her how business was, and all that."

The young fellow's voice broke.

Randolph bowed out a sympathetic hand.

"She'll forgive you, all right," he said. "But you sit right down tonight and confess, old man. It's not only the right thing, but the best policy, to be perfectly frank with her, and if she's in love with you she'll forgive you."

But Perceval shook his head. "I don't dare," he said huskily. "I am so afraid I'll lose her, Randolph, and she is the dearest thing in the world."

"You have said that before," Randolph remarked patiently. "I think you are making an awful mistake, but it will have to work itself out if you won't take any advice."

Then he went to his own room and smoked another pipe on it, and after that he wrote a letter.

And in three days came a letter to Perceval. "Dear boy," it began, "I must come to you at once. Things at home are in a dreadful state. I will tell you when I reach you. I know you haven't much for us to live on, but I have a little money in the bank that I have saved from my allowance, and I shall follow this note at once. Expect me on the 10:30 a. m. Friday."

"ANNABEL!"

"And this," said Perceval desperately as he showed the note to Randolph. "Is Thursday. What am I going to do with her when she gets here, Randolph?"

Randolph smiled inscrutably. "Find some rooms in a cheap quarter and set up housekeeping."

Perceval's face brightened. "And go out every morning and make her think I've gone to work? You are a genius, Randolph."

It took the two men several hours to find a little furnished apartment that would seem suitable for a young couple with little money. Perceval grumbled disconsolately. "I hate to put my jewel in such a setting," he said.

"Tell her the truth," Randolph again advised. "and you won't have to put up with such cheap things."

But Perceval refused. The next morning he met Annabel at the station, and together they went to the little cheap apartment, and here Annabel wept on his shoulder.

Her account of the trouble at home was somewhat vague, but she was enthusiastic over the thought of her housekeeping. "It will be lovely to work for you," she said.

But Perceval found it anything but lovely. He hated to see her soft white hands in the dishwasher. It made him wince to see her bending over the flaming stove, and even the joy of her presence could not take away his sense of infinite guilt.

And so he grew thin and pale and worn.

"You are working too hard," Annabel said one night. And when he shook his head drearily his little wife crept out to the janitor's room and telephoned to some one.

"He is punished enough," was her queer message. "Can't you have him go to his old quarters tonight and have it over?"

The next night Perceval said to Annabel: "I have an engagement with Randolph. You won't mind if I leave you, will you, dear?"

"Of course not," she acquiesced. "I can get along just this one time."

Randolph told him that he wished to borrow some of Perceval's books. "I knew they were in your rooms, and I thought you wouldn't mind coming over," said he. "So I took the liberty of asking you to desert your wife for one evening."

As the two men entered the luxurious quarters Perceval sighed. "To think of my condemning Annabel to such hideousness as that apartment we are living in!" he said, leaning down to turn on the low electric lamp on his study table.

The light flared up and showed the cozy room, the little fire already lighted in the open grate, the blue flame burning under the brass teakettle.

"Why, what?" Perceval demanded, like the big bear in the fairy tale. "Who has been living in my room?"

From behind a tall screen came a little figure in white.

"Oh, Perceval!" cried Annabel and threw herself in his arms.

And when Randolph had explained that he had taken chances and had written the truth to Perceval's little wife and Annabel had explained that she had known he was going to school and not to work ever since she had come to him, and oh, didn't he know that she would love him if he was rich, Perceval drew a long breath of happiness.

"I don't deserve it," he confessed, with his eyes shining, "and we can't live in these rooms, Annabel. But I am going to take my chances with dad, and when he sees what a dear little, queer little thing you are he will give in, and if he doesn't I can earn my living like a man now that I am square with you, sweetheart."

Made the Most of It.

A famous big game hunter visited the Swazis one winter, and the king took a liking to him and leaned him on his first hunt, the court praiser. The praiser's business was to laud the king and the king's favorites. The white hunter on his expedition had bad luck. He only shot a rabbit. But as he passed with his retinue through the Swazi village on his return the praiser marched before him chanting in a loud voice:

"The great white huntsman has killed a rabbit! Let all the Swazi people hear. It was as big as an ox, as fierce as a lion and as swift as a buck. The brave white huntsman killed it alone and unaided. He killed it with his thunder tube. Listen, ye people! The white huntsman has killed a rabbit! It was as terrible as a tiger, as large as an elephant, and yet the huntsman from afar, the great white slayer, he alone has killed it!"

LONGEST TELEGRAPH CIRCUIT

Is 4,000 Miles Long, Extending from London to Teheran, in Persia.

Persia and its capital, Teheran, have been very much before the public lately, but probably few people are aware that the news which has come through to London has passed over the longest telegraphic circuit in the world, says the London Daily News.

The distance between London and Teheran by wire is 4,000 miles and the operator in Teheran communicates direct with the operator at the London end, automatic repeaters taking the place of operators at ten places along the circuit.

The first repeating station from London is at Lowestoft where the wires enter the North sea, beneath which they run for 200 miles to Enn-dent, Hanover, where the second automatic repeater continues the message.

Thence it is flashed to Berlin, Warsaw, Rouno, Odessa, Kertch, Sukhum, Kaleh, Tiflis and Tauris, from each of which stations it is instantaneously forwarded without human intervention, the telegraphist at Teheran, who receives the message from Tauris, being the first operator to handle it since it left London. From Teheran the line then extends to India, but nowhere else is there a circuit so long as that between Teheran and London.

PARADISE FOR SUFFRAGISTS

A Little Corner of the Sahara Desert Where Feminism is in Full Swing.

A French explorer just returned from Africa has addressed an open letter to Mlle. Laloe and to the woman doctor Mme. Pelletier, the great advocates of woman's rights advising them to leave at once for the Sahara, or rather to that district inhabited by the tribe called Tuaregs.

The Tuaregs, says the explorer, are crafty, cruel and treacherous, but they are ardent apostles of feminism. The Tuareg women are indeed privileged beings. They have camels of their own, which their husbands are not allowed to mount, and their household duties are, so to say, nil.

They are allowed to have an admirer who saddles their camels and runs errands for them. According to the Gentlewoman, the attitude of this admirer must remain strictly platonic, for if he starts making love to the lady the husband flies into a temper, and an angry Tuareg becomes a dangerous creature.

According to the laws of the country the Tuareg woman need not follow her husband unless she wants to do so, nor is she compelled to serve her spouse. She is educated, for she can read, and this accomplishment, not shared by the other six, gives her a privileged position in so far that she acts as judge or arbitrator in all difficult cases.

Not Afraid.

Personal courage invests its owner with a protection beyond that afforded by outside forces. An illustration of this is recorded by Gen. William F. Draper in his "Recollections of a Varied Career," where he gives this incident:

In 1864 Col. Daniels of the Seventh Rhode Island became unpopular with some of his command, and a rumor spread that he would be shot at the next engagement. He heard of it.

It was customary when guns had been loaded for some time to have them discharged into some convenient bank, and Col. Daniels took advantage of this. Marching his regiment out with loaded rifles, he faced them toward a suitable elevation, and taking position on the top of it, and in front of them as at dress parade, he gave the commands, Ready, Aim, Fire, and the pieces were discharged.

Needless to say, any man could have shot him with little danger of discovery, and needless to say, also, none of them did. There were no more threats of that kind in his regiment—Youth's Companion.

Foreigners at German Universities.

The number of foreign students at the German universities, which, owing to the increased severity in the conditions of admission, had declined last year to 3,594, has risen to 3,921, chiefly because this is the first summer in which foreign women could matriculate at all universities. The numbers include 1,578 Russians, 674 Austro-Hungarians, 306 Swiss, 135 English, 154 Bulgarians, 102 Rumanians, 68 Serbians, 69 French, 298 Americans, 175 Asiatics and 4 Australians. Of these 1,181 entered for medicine. Berlin and Leipzig are now the favorite universities instead of Heidelberg, which formerly headed the list.

Expensive Foundations.

The cost of foundations for new buildings in New York runs at times into very high figures. The contract for the foundation work of the new 25-story municipal building to be erected at the Brooklyn bridge entrance has just been let to the foundation company for $1,443,147. The caissons must be carried down below the subway station to rock, which lies in places 80 feet below street level.

A Sporting Chance.

"I'll teach you to play at pitch and toss!" shouted the enraged father. "I'll flog you for an hour, I will!"

"Father," instantly said the incorrigible, as he balanced a penny on his thumb and finger, "I'll toss you to make it two hours or nothing."—Casell's Saturday Journal.

A MATEUR STRATEGY

By TEMPLE BAILEY
[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Perceval's den in Burkeley hall was hung with the usual conglomerate collection of trifles on which college youths pride themselves. Strangely enough, however, though otherwise complete, it lacked one of the essentials—indeed, a vital essential—of a student's room decorations. There were no photographs.

The other fellows had pictures of girls in evening gowns, girls in street costume, girls in golf garb, girls on horseback, girls afoot—always girls. But not a girl's picture adorned Perceval's den except one lonely small miniature, and that stood far withdrawn, hidden on the back of his desk.

Randolph Chase hauled it out on one occasion before Perceval could reach him with a detaining hand.

"What a queer little girl!" Randolph said.

"Put it back," Perceval said shortly, his face aflame.

But the other fellows crowded behind Randolph and looked at the picture over his shoulder.

"Such a mop of hair and such a little face!" said one of them.

"Put it back!" Perceval's tone rasped with irritation. "Put it back, Randolph!"

Randolph, after one glance at the younger man's countenance, set the miniature back on the desk hastily. "Oh, if you feel that way about it," he apologized.

But the next night when he was alone with Perceval he said: "I don't want to be inquisitive, but I was awfully interested in that girl's face. Who is she?"

Perceval was standing at the window, looking out upon the elm bordered street, where the big electric lights cast great shadows.

"That," he said without looking around—"that girl, as you call her, is Mrs. Perceval Moore."

"What?" Randolph's tone expressed extreme incredulity. "You surely don't mean—"

Perceval whirled around. "That I am married? Yes."

Randolph whistled. "Well, of all things!" he said. "And after that there was silence."

Then Perceval came over and flung himself into a chair opposite Randolph. "I've simply got to tell somebody, Chase," he said. "I'm in an awful fix, and she's the dearest and truest and best little thing in the world."

Randolph reached over and picked up the miniature again. "She truly looks it," he said after he had studied it for a long time.

Perceval choked a little before he answered. "She's an angel, Randolph."

"Then what's the matter?" Randolph questioned.

Perceval leaned forward. "I've deceived her. She doesn't know that I am in college. She thinks I am earning a good salary in business."

"Well, son," said Randolph Chase. "It seems to me that sort of deception is a kind that a girl can forgive easily enough. I guess she won't be wildly indignant when she finds that next year—it is next year that you come of age, isn't it?—you'll have a big pile of money coming to you. Any girl would be tickled to death to find that."

Perceval shook his head. "Not Annabel," he declared. "Isn't her name dear and old fashioned, Chase?"

"Yes," Randolph agreed. "But why will she object to a million, Perceval?"

"Because she will say that I lied to her," Perceval said slowly. "And Annabel can forgive anything but a lie."

"Out with it!" Randolph probed. "Tell me the whole story. It must be a queer one, and if you don't mind my saying so, old man, she must be a queer girl."

"That's just what she is," said Perceval. "I met her last year at the beach. She was such a quaint, queer little thing that she attracted me. She always wore white, and I would find her sitting on the sand singing little songs to herself. There was an old sea captain to whom she talked a good deal, and I got him to introduce us."

"Well, she had read a lot of books on social equality, and she just simply didn't have any use for the gilded youth with money. What Annabel wanted was a man who worked, preferably with his hands, but, failing that, one who lived in the thick of the fight for existence. And she meant it too. And that is where I fell."

"I was head over heels in love with her," continued Perceval fervently. "and I simply wouldn't let her go. So I let her believe that I was working my way up in business. The first time she came to see me, I was one of those things that could be squared easily enough afterward. But, oh, Chase! I had to back that lie up with details on details until I had lied to her at least ten lies to the hour. Well, we were married before I left in the fall. I wasn't of age, and she wasn't, and she wouldn't leave home until I could support her without hampering my business career."

"I knew I had to come back to college or get dad down on me, so I told her to stay," groaned Perceval. "But I made her marry me for fear something might come between us, and I couldn't stand that, Randolph. But think how I'll appear to her, for I've lied in every letter, telling her how business was, and all that."

The young fellow's voice broke.

Randolph held out a sympathetic hand.

"She'll forgive you, all right," he said. "But you sit right down tonight and confess, old man. It's not only the right thing, but the best policy, to be perfectly frank with her, and if she's in love with you she'll forgive you."

But Perceval shook his head. "I don't dare," he said huskily. "I am so afraid I'll lose her, Randolph, and she is the dearest thing in the world."

"You have said that before," Randolph remarked patiently. "I think you are making an awful mistake, but it will have to work itself out if you won't take any advice."

Then he went to his own room and smoked another pipe on it, and after that he wrote a letter.

And in three days came a letter to Perceval. "Dear boy," it began. "I must come to you at once. Things at home are in a dreadful state. I will tell you when I reach you. I know you haven't much for us to live on, but I have a little money in the bank that I have saved from my allowance, and I shall follow this note at once. Expect me on the 10:30 a. m. Friday."

"ANNABEL."

"And this," said Perceval desperately as he showed the note to Randolph. "is Thursday. What am I going to do with her when she gets here, Randolph?"

Randolph smiled inscrutably. "Find some rooms in a cheap quarter and set up housekeeping."

Perceval's face brightened. "And go out every morning and make her think I've gone to work? You are a genius, Randolph!"

It took the two men several hours to find a little furnished apartment that would seem suitable for a young couple with little money. Perceval grumbled disconsolately. "I hate to put my jewel in such a setting," he said.

"Tell her the truth," Randolph again advised, "and you won't have to put up with such cheap things."

But Perceval refused. The next morning he met Annabel at the station, and together they went to the little cheap apartment, and here Annabel wept on his shoulder.

Her account of the trouble at home was somewhat vague, but she was enthusiastic over the thought of her housekeeping. "It will be lovely to work for you," she said.

But Perceval found it anything but lovely. He hated to see her soft white hands in the dishwater. It made him wince to see her bending over the flaming stove, and even the joy of her presence could not take away his sense of infinite guilt.

And so he grew thin and pale and worn.

"You are working too hard," Annabel said one night. And when she shook his head drearily his little wife crept out to the janitor's room and telephoned to some one.

"He is punished enough," was her queer message. "Can't you have him go to his old quarters tonight and have it over?"

The next night Perceval said to Annabel: "I have an engagement with Randolph. You won't mind if I leave you, will you, dear?"

"Of course not," she acquiesced. "I can get along just this one time."

Randolph told him that he wished to borrow some of Perceval's books. "I knew they were in your rooms, and I thought you wouldn't mind coming over," said he. "So I took the liberty of asking you to desert your wife for one evening."

As the two men entered the luxurious quarters Perceval sighed. "To think of my condemning Annabel to such hideousness as that apartment we are living in!" he said, leaning down to turn on the low electric lamp on his study table.

The light flared up and showed the cozy room, the little fire already lighted in the open grate, the blue flame burning under the brass teakettle.

"Why, what?" Perceval demanded, like the big bear in the fairy tale. "Who has been living in my room?"

From behind a tall screen came a little figure in white.

"Oh, Perceval!" cried Annabel and threw herself in his arms.

And when Randolph had explained that he had taken chances and had written the truth to Perceval's little wife and Annabel had explained that she had known he was going to school and not to work ever since she had come to him, and, oh, didn't he know that she would love him if he was rich, Perceval drew a long breath of happiness.

"I don't deserve it," he confessed, with his eyes shining, "and we can't live in these rooms, Annabel. But I am going to take my chances with dad, and when he sees what a dear little, queer little thing you are he will give in, and if he doesn't I can earn my living like a man now that I am square with you, sweetheart."

Made the Most of It.

A famous big game hunter visited the Swazis one winter, and the king took a liking to him and begged him, on his first hunt, the court praiser.

The praiser's business was to laud the king and the king's favorites. The white hunter on his expedition had had luck. He only shot a rabbit. But as he passed with his retinue through the Swazi village on his return the praiser marched before him chanting in a loud voice:

"The great white huntsman has killed a rabbit! Let all the Swazi people hear. It was as big as an ox, as fierce as a lion and as swift as a buck. The brave white huntsman killed it alone and unaided. He killed it with his thunder robe. Listen, ye people! The white huntsman has killed a rabbit! It was as terrible as a tiger, as large as an elephant, and yet the huntsman from afar the great white slayer, he alone has killed it!"

The young fellow's voice broke.

Is 4,000 Miles Long, Extending from London to Teheran, in Persia.

Persia and its capital, Teheran, have been very much before the public lately, but probably few people are aware that the news which has come through to London has passed over the longest telegraphic circuit in the world, says the London Daily News.

The distance between London and Teheran by wire is 4,000 miles and the operator in Teheran communicates direct with the operator at the London end, automatic repeaters taking the place of operators at ten places along the circuit.

The first repeating station from London is at Lowestoft where the wires enter the North sea, beneath which they run for 200 miles to Emden, Hanover, where the second automatic repeater continues the message.

Thence it is flashed to Berlin, Warsaw, Rouno, Odessa, Kertch, Sukhum, Kaleh, Tiflis and Tauris, from each of which stations it is instantaneously forwarded without human intervention, the telegraphist at Teheran, who receives the message from Tauris, being the first operator to handle it since it left London. From Teheran the line then extends to India, but nowhere else is there a circuit so long as that between Teheran and London.

PARADISE FOR SUFFRAGISTS

A Little Corner of the Sahara Desert Where Feminism Is in Full Swing.

A French explorer just returned from Africa has addressed an open letter to Mlle. Laloe and to the woman doctor Mme. Pelletier, the great advocates of woman's rights advising them to leave at once for the Sahara, or rather to that district inhabited by the tribe called Tuaregs.

The Tuaregs, says the explorer, are crafty, cruel and treacherous, but they are ardent apostles of feminism. The Tuareg women are indeed privileged beings. They have camels of their own, which their husbands are not allowed to mount, and their household duties are, so to say, nil.

They are allowed to have an admirer who saddles their camels and runs errands for them. According to the Gentlewoman, the attitude of this admirer must remain strictly platonic, for if he starts making love to the lady the husband flies into a temper, and an angry Tuareg becomes a dangerous creature.

According to the laws of the country the Tuareg woman need not follow her husband unless she wants to do so, nor is she compelled to serve her spouse. She is educated, for she can read, and this accomplishment, not shared by the other six, gives her a privileged position in so far that she acts as judge or arbitrator in all difficult cases.

Not Afraid.

Personal courage invests its owner with a protection beyond that afforded by outside forces. An illustration of this is recorded by Gen. William F. Draper in his "Recollections of a Varied Career," where he gives this incident:

In 1864 Col. Daniels of the Seventh Rhode Island became unpopular with some of his command, and a rumor spread that he would be shot at the next engagement. He heard of it.

It was customary when guns had been loaded for some time to have them discharged into some convenient bank, and Col. Daniels took advantage of this. Marching his regiment out with loaded rifles, he faced them toward a suitable elevation, and taking position on the top of it, and in front of them as at dress parade, he gave the commands, Ready, Aim, Fire, and the pieces were discharged.

Needless to say, any man could have shot him with little danger of discovery, and needless to say, also, none of them did. There were no more threats of that kind in his regiment—Youth's Companion.

Foreigners at German Universities.

The number of foreign students at the German universities, which, owing to the increased severity in the conditions of admission, had declined last year to 3,594, has risen to 3,921, chiefly because this is the first summer in which foreign women could matriculate at all universities. The numbers include 1,578 Russians, 674 Austro-Hungarians, 306 Swiss, 155 English, 154 Bulgarians, 102 Rumanians, 68 Servians, 50 French, 288 Americans, 175 Asiatics and 4 Australians. Of these 1,181 entered for medicine. Berlin and Leipzig are now the favorite universities instead of Heidelberg, which formerly headed the list.

Expensive Foundations.

The cost of foundations for new buildings in New York runs at times into very high figures. The contract for the foundation work of the new 25-story municipal building to be erected at the Brooklyn bridge entrance has just been let to the foundation company for $143,147. The caissons must be carried down below the subway station to rock, which lies in places 89 feet below street level.

A Sporting Chance.

"I'll teach you to play at pitch and toss!" shouted the enraged father. "I'll flog you for an hour, I will!"

"Father!" instantly said the incorrigible, as he balanced a penny on his thumb and finger. "I'll toss you to make it two hours or nothing!"—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

THE HOME AND THE SCHOOL

ELOQUENT AND INTERESTING
SERMON BY REV. L. DOWOTT.

Delivered During Week of Prayer
by the Pastor of the Methodist Church.

I am to discuss the glory, strength, and weakness of the home and school in so far as they contribute to, or detract from the betterment of mankind and the progress of the race. A good home is the grandest and most glorious institution in the world. It is rightly and worthily the most delightful and loveliest place on earth. Everything that is really beautiful or lovely in life and in human relations, and in the world's activities, has had its beginning and nurture in the home. It is no wonder poets sing its praises, and writers of prose laud its beauty and glory. It is no wonder that the pilgrim often yearns for it, and that the traveler's heart leaps for joy when homeward bound. It is, first and last, not only the most delightful and loveliest place, it is the most precious memory of all the years of life. The home is also the greatest institution in the world. It is the greatest in several respects. It is greatest in that it is the first, and oldest institution. It is greatest next because of being the nucleus of the church and state. The church began in the home with the father as prophet and priest, and the mother as helper and ministering angel. The state began in the home with the father as king, and the mother as queen, and the children as subjects. The church is simply homes united with supervising prophets and priests, growing out of the needs of means to stimulate home piety, to eliminate selfishness in the world, to promote the spirit of brotherhood and the practice of righteousness. The state is simply an aggregation of homes under supervising rulers growing out of the need of adjusting and regulating the conflicting interests of human society, and to promote general peace and prosperity. There are some who in view of the existence of the church and state—eliminate the church and the state in the home, every such course will prove disastrous as has been the case in the past, as when the Kingdom of Sparta took the child out of homes and made them public wards. It is well just here to note that the establishment of the church and the state does not abrogate the fact of the father still being the divinely appointed prophet, priest, and king in the home. It is still obligatory that he teach religion, and hold religious worship, and also, that he train the children to obedience of law and authority. It is by and through these things that the home derives and retains its superlative greatness over any other institution. That which produces, is greater than the thing produced. The home is also the greatest institution because it has more power for good or evil than any other I except nothing so far as either one concerned. Take it with reference to evil. I do not except the house of ill fame, the gambling den, the dancing hall, the theatre, the pool room, the liquor club room, nor even the saloon which is said to be, and not without reason, the most demoralizing and ruinous institution in the world, I grant all of these do their share of evil, but most of their victims get their start in the home through neglect or bad teaching, or bad influences. To prove my assertion and to show I am not talking at random, let me refer you to some results of investigations. Mr. Kingsmill in his book, "Prison and Prisoners" records that 4 out of every 5 criminals convicted and imprisoned had their beginning in bad homes or want of homes. Col. Gardner Tufts who for 10 years had oversight of all the youths in Mass. who were sentenced by the courts, says, that of the 20,000 brought under his charge not more than one tenth had anything like good homes, and nine tenths were reared in homes without good influences. Gov. Rice of the same state when in office said that seven eighths of the prisoners in the State prison were under 21 and they were not chiefly fallen good young men, but those who never had good home training. These same things hold true in every state in the union. You see my contention holds true. I know the custom is to lay the blame on conditions outside of the home. Parents will say: "The saloon has my boy" or "The house of ill fame has my girl," but in most cases you will find the home is to blame. They got their start through neglect to subdue their evil natures by godly teaching, and holy examples, and careful training. A child can no more be good or do good without good teaching and good training than a leopard can change his spots or the Ethiopian his skin. In the presence of bad teaching and bad example they must go wrong. Again I say, "The home is the mightiest factors for evil in the world. The saloons and other evil places are only their resorts and the feeders in their downward careers.

Now take the other declaration that the home is the greatest institution in its power for good. In this respect, too, I except nothing, neither the Sunday School, nor any other school, nor the state, nor Young Men's or Young Women's Christian Associations, and not even the church. I grant these are great and good institutions and do good, but they are only powerful and at their best in so far as the homes lead to them. They have little or no influence over those that lead otherwise, except as they go diligently after the children and then nurture them. But they can never save as frequently as the children go astray. So the start in the home is the mightiest power. That the home is the mightiest power for good is evidenced from the fact that ministers almost exclusively come from good homes. Once this matter came up in an assembly of 120 ministers and they began an investigation among themselves of their ancestry and early life, with a view to how many had good homes, and it was found that every one could trace his course to a good home. There used to be a great deal of discredit thrown upon ministers' sons and daughters because of their vivacity and exuberant spirits and pranks. Their mischief was classed as vice. However that may be, they have made good. A greater proportion comparatively have attained to eminence and worthy citizenship than in any other profession or calling in life. Reference to any biographical encyclopedia will be sufficient to convince any one that may be skeptical. The rule is that out of good homes come good children. It is the exception if any go wrong. Less than 5 per cent. of the sons and daughters out of preachers' homes have been caught in the maelstroms of evil, or added anything to the destructive or demoralizing forces of the world. This is all the more remarkable when we consider that some good parents fail in their duty to their children in the way of both teaching and training as in the instance of Eli, the high priest and judge of Israel. The home is the strategic point for cultivating, promoting and propagating all good. It is truthfully said that a child that is sent out from a pure well regulated home has half the battle of life fought. Now I have only considered the power of the home for good or evil so far as the children are concerned, but it does not end there by any means.

The home is the determining factor in the motives and morals and ideals of individuals of society, of business, of politics and of the state. Whatever the motives, morals and ideals in the home, they will be in all the affairs of life, society business and government. If you know what they are in the homes you know just what they will be in other spheres. If you can obtain the general moral average of the homes in any community, you can strike the mean average of the morals of the community, and vice versa.

In the geographical world, springs make brooks, brooks make creeks, creeks make rivers and rivers make oceans. In the human world, homes make communities, communities make states, and states make nations. If the springs are pure, the brooks and rivers will be pure. If springs send forth bitter and foul waters, the brooks, creeks, and rivers will be nauseous and deadly. So, if homes are pure and send out well taught and well trained christian young men, the community, state, and nation will be clean and flourish, if the fountain of the home is tainted and poisoned by sin and worldliness, then those who come out will carry its contaminating and demoralizing and deadly influence into society business and the government, and what exists in the homes will exist there, except that it will be enlarged, expanded and more fully developed.

The christian home in conjunction with the church and school has produced all that is good and glorious in our civilization. The christian home and the church have been the factors in making good men and women, and the schools in making intelligent and progressive citizens. Most people think the chief sources of good and progress lie in the churches, and schools, and state, but they are really secondary, they are dependent upon the home. The church of itself can give truth and life and direction, but if these are not first husbanded and nurtured in the homes they will largely go for naught. The school of itself can only give intelligence, but if it is not tempered with the wisdom from above, it only tends toward selfishness and barbarism. The state of itself can only legislate and govern, but legislation and government cannot make people better. It is necessary to good government, that those by whom it is administered, and the governed be righteous, otherwise the people will mourn. Thus you see the christian home underlies every good and glorious thing. Now while it is true that the church cannot propagate good without the cooperation of the home, it is equally true that the home cannot regenerate and promote good without the church. One is dependent upon the other and their work is retroactive. The same is true of the home with regard to the school and nation, there must be cooperation. Without christian homes and good home influences the church could make little headway; the schools would produce only scholars without religious tone, or noble sentiment, or lofty ideals; the state would be shown respect for law and morals, and it would not be long until society, business, politics would all go to the bad fully.

Now we come to the alarming part of this subject. While the christian home has been a marvelous factor in our civilization and has certainly led in the uplift of the world, there are unmistakable signs of its decay. The home and home life, have been undergoing wonderful changes, in some respects the homes have been changing for the better. They have become more beautiful and more complete in equipments, they are more beautiful in architecture, more beautiful in furnishings, more commodious, fuller of conveniences and comforts, and more beautiful in arrangements, but while the home has been changing for better, the home life has to a less or greater extent changing for worse. We have fallen upon sad times. The religious feature, "the church in the home," and the beautiful pious spirit that characterized the grand-fathers and grand-mothers, which have made so much for good, have been and are declining and if things keep on the dear old grand-father's and grand-mother's of to day, who are so good and pious will soon be a thing of the past. The grand-father's and grand-mother's of to-morrow will not take their places nor be like them, they will simply be "the old men," and "the old women." We are already reaping the harvest in the decline of home life, it is cropping out everywhere. We can see it in the widespread spirit of worldliness. To a very large extent the trend of things seems to be downward and away from good. But to be more specific we see it first in the unfaithfulness to the marriage vows. Nothing is more ominous or portentous in our times than the liberal and loose way in which the marriage relation is viewed. According to the divorce statistics of California, one out of every six married couples in that state is divorced. In Ohio one out of every five marriages are said to end in divorce, and 10,000 divorces take place in a single year. In some states the conditions are better, but bad enough, for the census report of 1900 reveals that one out of every twelve marriages in the United States, ended in a divorce court, and further, that there was an average of 73 divorces to every 100,000 inhabitants. Still further, according to the census board at Washington, there was a suit filed for divorce every two minutes, and a divorce granted every three minutes for the previous twenty years. Divorce has become so common that it would really be impolitic, if one regarded policy, to speak against it in many religious congregations.

Again, the decline of the religious home is cropping out in the rude manners, bad habits, rowdiness, hoodlumism, lawlessness, disobedience, irreverence, vicious practices, and degenerate doings in general among children. The average American child is selfish, domineering, self-willed, pert, forward, insolent, imprudent, obstinate, and in some cases incorrigible. It does not regard the rights of others, nor respect authority. It is a terror in the schools, in civil affairs, in society, yes, everywhere. Conditions in some places have become so bad that curfew laws have to be adopted by town and city councils. They are compelled to take matters in hand to protect the public and to stay the increase of vice, crime and immorality. The curfew law wherever necessitated is a shame and disgrace to our modern home life.

Again this decline is cropping out in the dropping off in church attendance at all times, and in all services, but particularly in the night services. It is said that city churches with five hundred members, will often scarcely have fifty present in the Sunday night service. Many church members never go at all now, except on communion days. Bad as things are among adults, the absence of children is most conspicuous, and the sad feature.

Again, it is cropping out in the widespread demoralization of the times among all classes and everywhere. The social, business, and political spheres of activity are all noney combed with corruptions of every kind. There is such an absence of moral consciousness, and moral rectitude, and moral purity among men away up, and among many of our youth that it is almost appalling. They seem to have no regard for honor, and have little, if any realization of the obligation of righteousness to those about them, or to the God above them. The golden rule is flung aside as though it were mere rubbish. These things are manifest in the corrupt legislation in the state, in the city councils, and in Congress, and in the constant need of Investigating Committees, and in their astounding revelations. I need not refer you to the "land grabs", the graft, bribes and other kinds of dishonesty prevailing so extensively. It is also manifest in the exposures of the trusts and corporations that have beat the government; also in the exposure of the thousands who seek escape from payments of duties; also in the election frauds and selling of voting franchises, also in the exposure of swindling schemes and in other things. We are almost daily astounded at the number and character of the men in high life, and in the limelight of public position and public trust who are breaking under moral tests. The state and the nation is in disgrace because of it. Time fails me to speak of the growing disregard of the sabbath, and the consequent harm, and of other evils. Now I am not a sensationalist, nor a pessimist, nor a misguided alarmist. I can see that on the whole things are not as bad as they seem, and that in reality and truly they were never better or brighter in the world's history, and that the things mentioned are only frequent exceptions, rather than the rule. But, they are significant and show the trend of the times and the need of calling a halt. I know of the many loyal christian homes that have been and are yet fountains of truth and purity, and how they have produced and sent forth thousands of men and women who are blessing the world and mankind by their noble lives and heroism and unselfish deeds; but still there is danger and all are in jeopardy and liable to be affected by the same virulent poisons that have been, and are at work now blighting and destroying human society.

But some one may say, "Is the home responsible and to blame for these fearful conditions we face in the church, in society and in affairs of business and state?" Some think not. Some are disposed to lay the blame on the ministry, some on the spirit of religious feature, "the church in the

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong,
Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of the home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of these peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 31 stamps.

THE HOME AND THE SCHOOL.

the times, some elsewhere, but try to evade it as much as you will, nevertheless it lays at the door of the home, and such evidence can be produced that it ought not to require either sage or philosopher to see it, you may think I am astray and wide of the mark, but hear me for my cause!

The seed of this harvest began to be sown nearly 50 years ago. We can trace the trend away from God and lofty motives to neglect of religious teaching and training in the home, and to the abandoning of the family altar. An improper idea of the purpose of the Sunday School may have had something to do with these things for parents seemed largely to have turned over this whole matter to its care. The consequence has been the most important period of their lives, with most favorable environment were unimproved, and when they thought to begin their religious education, and training, the favorable opportunity was practically over, and the trend to their lives already given and their future in some measure determined. There are no years of life so valuable in a child's life as the elementary years the years when just beginning to learn to do things. No Sunday School can ever make up fully for failure on the part of parents in this period. The consequence of such courses is that the families of such are not grounded in the faith nor in the practice of its principles, and not having much depth of root to their religious convictions it has been very easy to slip into a motiveless life, other than its own selfish gratification. There were never so many people who lived on the principle that we should eat, drink and make merry, for tomorrow we die, as now, though it is not heralded from the house tops. I have really been amazed of later years to find how many people are actually assuring and reassuring themselves that death ends all.

We can trace the dishonesty and corruptions in business and politics to the spirit of greed in the homes. Righteous living brought prosperity, instead of cultivating a thankful and benevolent spirit they became greedy for more. This has led to the push, rush and hurry of modern life. The rich want to get richer, and the poor want to keep up with the rich. The children are taught by example, if not by precept, that money getting is the chief aim of life, and so they set out to get it by hook or crook, just so they get it, and that is their highest ambition.

We can also trace the lessening absence of a church going habit to lack of its early formation in the home. Failure in this respect, and lack of interest and loss of power to hold the young people has been noticed for years. The churches began to look for the cause, and to invent means to correct it. It resulted in the organization of young peoples societies, and lately to brotherhoods; then to using church attendance punch cards and rewards; to the formation of boys and girls clubs and the Lord only knows what not! This has all been done on the assumption that the church is failing to do its duty by the young people. Young men, and young women's Christian Associations have been launched on the same basis. If not on this, then on the basis of offsetting the neglect in the home. However that may be, the real truth in the fault is not in the church itself, and it has been working at the wrong place and only complicating matters. The real fault is in the home. Parents have been getting careless and the children are not trained in church going habits young enough. They have been humored and allowed to go or not as they might choose, and they have chosen not to go. That's the solution.

We can trace the pleasure craze to prosperity. Prosperity awakens desires in the home for show and a good time in general, more often than a care for the poor, the sick, the maimed and blind. The temptation has been yielded to, and no such gorgeous social entertainments, and no such dissipation, licentiousness and gluttony has been known since the days of Rome. The accounts of bacchanalian orgies that come to us in the daily papers bid fair to eclipse the Roman feasts, when every law of decency was outraged and they actually took emetics so they could eat and drink more, but modestly forbids me speaking further.

We can trace divorces to unscriptural ideas of the marriage relation that are entertained in homes. One is that marriage is only a legal contract and not a holy compact or an ordinance of God. Another is that of looking upon it from a mercenary point of view, and considering "doing well" by the wealth and social standing of the man or woman rather than character and love. Another is regarding it as a mere matter of lustful convenience, and consequent entering into it wantonly rashly and unadvisedly. Another thing is failure in the home to teach self control and the practice of a spirit of forbearance and grace. This is evident from the fact that the most frequent cause given for divorce is cruelty and incompatibility.

We can trace the prevalence of lawlessness, crime, revolution and terrorism to the failure of the average home in controlling the children. The children are allowed to do as they please. They are never compelled to do anything they don't want to do, or to desist from anything they want to do. Their wills are never controlled or broken and they are never taught to reverence law or authority. It could not be otherwise than that we should reap as we have sown, and the reaping is fearful to contemplate.

We can trace the common and increasing indulgence in questionable amusements to the home. Parent have actually been opening the doors and setting the pace. Euchre decks of cards are to be seen almost as frequently in christian homes as unchristian homes. Christian parents are now going to dances and theatres. Wine drinking customs are also again being brought into the home. Some time ago a young man told me that during a short stay in a christian community he had been in nearly 50 homes and was offered wine or cider nearly as many times and this in so-called christian homes. As an excuse for these innovations the parents say, "Oh, the dear children—the dear children must have pleasure." Yes! the dear children must be indulged. Yes! you will give them fire or a viper to play with, no wonder so many are burned and bitten. Again the parents say as an excuse, "Would you make the home a tomb or a sepulchre? No! make it as cheerful and pleasant as the finest club room or saloon; but you don't need to bring in the gamblers cards, nor the saloon to do it."

Just one other thing more. We can trace the existence of club rooms, lodges, and other modern resorts to taking the religious features out of home life. There are few really happy firesides anymore. There is no assembling of the family together—there is nothing to assemble it for except meals or a wedding or funeral, consequently the men gravitate toward the club room or other resorts. Many homes are mere inns, places to eat and sleep. The family life is lost in the whirl of business and the gayety of society.

These derelictions in the homes and the attendant evils looming up in the world are coming to be recognized as having a vital and inseparable connection, and everywhere, from pulpit and press, the cry is being raised, "Back to the christian home." The perpetuation of good, and its propagation in the world depends upon restoring and preserving the christian home. It's the only solution to working out all problems relating to righteousness, peace, order, prosperity and happiness. Make the fountain of home pure, keep it pure, control and direct it right in the beginning and its outflow will be a benediction in the world and the mightiest element in its uplift.

Now just a word about our schools. They are the glory of our civilization. No other people have ever enjoyed such educational advantages, and nowhere else is there such wide spread intelligence. In days that have gone by they have fostered all that was good and uplifting in the home. Parents could always be sure that their boys and girls would be safe when sent to them. But sad to say that cannot always be said now, for the same elements are at work there as in the home, yea the poison seems to be everywhere. Our common schools are better than ever in most respects—but in their moral aspects, if all we hear is true—not so good. They are said to be to a less or greater extent, permeated with vice and with the spirit of caste. This condition is not the result of fault in the lives of the teachers or any immoral teaching. It has the same source and it comes largely in the same way as the elements of decline have come in church and nation. But to make matters worse the same conditions that are at work in the home are creeping into the text books, they largely lack those things that would inculcate moral or ethical sentiment and practice. Besides this the curriculum makes no provision for teaching anything along ethical line which should and could be done without infringing on any statute in our government pertaining to religious liberty. The are certain ethical standards that are fundamental to citizenship, on which all agree, that should by all means be taught. In old reading books there used to be much along ethical lines, now you can scarcely find anything of that character.

The Seminaries, and the College and the Universities are more magnificent than ever, and equipped with better facilities to teach, but they too have been on the retrograde in the supreme essential in all education. The home neglect is in telling them as well as elsewhere. It is actually dangerous to send a young man or woman away any more, so many schools are permeated with skepticism and there are so many things to lead astray. Once emphasis was laid on chapel services and the religious needs were individually looked after. Now it is largely left to organizations and there is a spirit of religious indifference. Once emphasis was laid on literary societies, now it is laid on athletics, which as conducted contributes more toward the cultivation of the brutal instincts, and incidentally, to gambling propensities than to health and vigor. Once all were one great family in the college, now fraternities with their smokers, feeds, dancing and card playing rule the day, and the college is divided into cliques and factions. We have the Y. M. C. A.'s but they as a rule only exist at a dying rate, comparatively few attend or take any active interest in them. The moral tone of colleges was once very high, now it is comparatively low. All over the land the need is felt for a revival of religious interest in Colleges and Universities, and steps are being taken in many in that direction. It is to be hoped there will soon come a reaction and a return to the old paths that have kept students of old fast on the Rock of Ages, and that have led them to such heroic endeavor, and to such eminent achievement in all spheres of life's activities and in the world's uplift and redemption.

It goes without question that some things are here to stay, but they must be permeated with the religion of Jesus Christ, and made to contribute toward strengthening christian character and building a noble manhood and womanhood. The seminaries, colleges and universities from the nature of things, are furnishing the leaders for the nation, and the future evolution of the nation for good or evil depends more on the character of the men and women than on their education. We need men and women of great intellectual grasp, disciplined and fitted for great tasks, and for solving the great social, economical and political problems of the age; but above all we need such as are controlled by the motives and principles of the greatest and best teacher and leader among men, Jesus Christ of Nazareth. The words of Oliver Wendell Holmes are fitting here: God give us men! A time like this demands

Great hearts, strong minds, true faith and willing hands.

Men whom the lust of office does not kill;

Men whom the spoils of office can not buy;

Men who possess opinions and a will;

Men who have honor, men who will not lie;

For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds,

Their large professions and their little deeds,

Wrangle in selfish strike—lo! Freedom weeps,

Wrong rules the land and waiting justice sleeps.

I will now conclude with a little poem by George Bethune:

O God, look down upon the land which Thou has loved so well,

And grant that in unbroken truth her children still may dwell;

Nor, while the grass grows on the hill and streams flow through the vale,

May they forget their fathers' faith, or in their covenant fail;

Keep, God, the fairest, noblest land that lies beneath the sun—

"Our country, our whole country, and our country ever one."

The back aches because the kidneys are blocked.

Help the kidneys with their work. The back will ache no more.

Lots of proof that Doan's Kidney Pills do this.

It's the best proof, for it comes from Gettysburg.

John J. Tawney, 234 Baltimore St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I hold Doan's Kidney Pills in high esteem and I always have a box in the house to use in case of need. I suffered from rheumatism and kidney complaint. My back ached constantly and often in the morning I was so stiff and lame that I could hardly get out of bed. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and caused me no end of annoyance. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so getting them from the People's Drug Store and I was surprised by their promptness in relieving me. My health improved greatly and I now have no cause for complaint. Two years ago a member of my family publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills in my behalf and at this time I can confirm that statement."

Report of Board of Health for 1910.

In accordance with the requirements of the law the following report of the Board of Health during the year 1910 has been submitted to the Town Council of Gettysburg by Dr. Henry Stewart, Secretary of the Board of Health:

January 10, 1911.
The Borough Council,
Gettysburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—
In accordance with the requirements of the Act of Assembly, I submit the following report of the operations of the Board of Health during the year 1910.

NUISANCES.

Ten complaints were laid before the Board, of which one was found on inspection to be without foundation.

Of the remaining nine, seven were abated upon notification.

In one case, we had to serve the formal notice of prosecution, to secure its abatement.

In the remaining case after abundant notice, and every allowance made for getting work done (during the military encampments last summer) the Board intervened and had the work done—after which we were compelled to enter suit for the cost of the work. Judgment has been obtained, upon which the bill will be collected, if not satisfied on the 23rd of this month.

MORBIDITY STATISTICS.

The following cases were reported:
Diphtheria 7
Typhoid fever 9
Pneumonia 5
Mumps 5
Whooping Cough 3
Chicken Pox 2
Erysipelas 2
Malarial Fever 1
Tubercular meningitis 1

Total 35

Deaths—From diphtheria 3; Tubercular Meningitis 1; total 4.

This is a truly remarkable record for a town of this size. Measles is again conspicuous by its total absence. It is hoped that when it does reappear we will have the co-operation of the public in willingly isolating cases, and by this means preventing its spreading as in former years. It is the intention of the Board to put forth every effort to have the law regarding the minor diseases fully enforced. As a preliminary, we have published a warning as to the liability of householders. While this is not legally necessary, it was done so that no one will have the excuse of ignorance of the requirements of the law.

The outbreak of diphtheria, undoubtedly imported, with its unfortunately high mortality, was the only serious feature of the year's work. Typhoid fever, while showing a slightly higher than usual number of cases, cannot be said to have been epidemic at any time, as the cases occurred scattered through the whole year.

CROSSING OVER THE BAREX-STATE SENATOR ALEXANDER STEWART PASSES AWAY.

Wm. O. Bishop, a Native of County and Prominent Business Man of Harrisburg.

EX-STATE SENATOR ALEXANDER STEWART, long prominent in the affairs of Franklin county, member of a distinguished family and active for years in the fight against Quay-Penrose domination of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, and well known to many Adams county people, died in his 68th year last Thursday at Chambersburg. He had been in failing health for several years. Two brothers, Justice John Stewart, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and George H. Stewart of Shippensburg, and a sister, Mrs. John Craig of Reading, survive him. Mrs. Stewart died in 1897. They had no children. When John Stewart led the independent fight in the gubernatorial campaign in 1882, Alexander Stewart was one of his advisers, and from that time continued active in the anti-machine movement. Alexander Stewart became the leader of the anti-Quay forces in the county, and the Republican county organization was turned against the state boss. After serving as Republican county chairman from 1897 to 1899, he was elected state senator in 1890 from the old Franklin-Huntington district without opposition from any candidate of any party. His second election was in 1904 and when Adams and Franklin were formed into a senatorial district he finished his term as representing this district. In the legislature of 1901 Senator Stewart opposed the election of Quay as United States senator, and throughout his period of service at Harrisburg he allied himself with the independent forces. The Quayites wasted much effort in trying to bring him over to their side. When his second term in the senate expired, he declined to be a candidate again. Failing health caused him to withdraw from active politics, but his counsel continued to be much sought. Senator Stewart came from Scotch-Irish stock and was born in Shippensburg, September 17, 1843. When only 17 years old he enlisted in Company D, 150th Pennsylvania Volunteers. Later he joined the 201st Pennsylvania Volunteers, and he was mustered out in 1865 as first lieutenant in command of Company K of that regiment. After the war he went west and engaged in hauling freight by wagon from Omaha to Denver. His first trip of this kind was undertaken alone and without experience, and after an adventurous journey he got his team safely over the Indian-infested plains. The freightage at that time was worth 20 cents a pound. Later with a partner, he drove horses east through the Indian country. Brushes with the Indians were numerous, and one day his partner, who had ventured too far from the wagon train, was driven in with several arrows sticking in his back. Returning to Franklin county, Senator Stewart took up the grain business at Scotland. He remained there until a few years ago, when he moved to Chambersburg to live in retirement.

WILLIAM O. BISHOP, aged 67 years, of Harrisburg, prominent in local Masonic circles and one of that city's leading manufacturers and business men, died last Thursday of a complication of diseases. He had been confined to the house since last August. He was a native of Adams county. Mr. Bishop is survived by his widow and the following children: Dr. A. L. Bishop of Philadelphia, Mrs. A. S. Delinger, Mrs. C. W. Burnett and W. H. Bishop of Harrisburg; one sister, Mrs. William Yount of Littlestown, Adams county, also survives. Mr. Bishop was a veteran of the Civil War. He was a member of Post 116, Grand Army of the Republic. He also belonged to Perseverance Lodge, No. 2, Free and Accepted Masons; Pilgrim Commandery, No. 11, Knights Templar, and Zumbo Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He was a director in the following companies: Central Trust Company, Merchants' National Bank, Harrisburg Light, Heat and Power Company and Harrisburg Steam Heat Company, and was vice-president of the Blough Manufacturing Company. He was a member of the famous old City Grays in the early eighties, a real estate man of wide reputation and one of the pioneer merchants of the West End, where he laid the foundation of his business success. For many years he conducted a large dry goods store on Verbeke street which was largely patronized by the farmers of Dauphin county. He retired from that business some years ago to give his attention to his growing out side interests. The funeral was held on Monday interment being made in the Harrisburg cemetery.

How to Keep a Husband Home.

The good wife always studies how to keep her husband home, for she'd rather have him with her than be in the house alone, and so she don't forget their courting days when as a girl her lover's praise would set her heart and pulses all a-whirl. She knows full well the value of a smile and pretty gown, when she meets her lord and master as he comes home tired from town, and the house all neat and tidy; and a restful atmosphere, and some loving word of greeting his weary heart to cheer. The woodwork with Chi-Namel all glistening and bright, no man from such a home would ever go down town at night. The new Parquetry Floor Stenciling Process gives a hundred dollar floor at a cost of only 2c per sq. foot. Any one can apply it. Sold by J. H. Colliflower.

and the mother went to live with her aunt, Mrs. Rebecca Oaster. Some years later Mrs. Esterline and her son removed to Baltimore. The son entered the navy and from that time became the only support of his mother. On the way home he changed cars and met with the accident resulting in his death. He was buried with military honors, the sailors acting as pall-bearers and his comrades on ship sending for his tomb a mass of flowers. He and his comrades on ship sending to be promoted to the rank of an officer this year.

CONSTANTINE J. ERDMAN, of Allentown, Congressman in the Berks-Lehigh district from 1893-1897 and one of the foremost Pennsylvania Democrats in the State died on Sunday in his 63rd year. Six months ago he had a stroke and recovering a month later was run over by an ice wagon and since then suffered 18 distinct strokes. He was well known in Gettysburg as a graduate of our college and on account of his interests in the institution.

Constantine Jacob Erdman, one of the foremost families in Lehigh county was all his life the embodiment of the best principles and traditions of a patriotic Pennsylvanian. The family is of Revolutionary stock, and his grandfather Jacob Erdman was a member of the Twenty-ninth Congress. Young Erdman, after attending the famous private school at Quakertown, conducted by Rev. Dr. A. R. Horne, went to Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, from which he was graduated with honors in 1885, at the age of 17. He was among the body of students that stood within 10 feet of Lincoln, when he delivered his immortal Gettysburg address, and also one of Lincoln's student guard of honor during the President's visit there to dedicate the battlefield.

Mr. Erdman was noted rather for his ability as a logician and lawyer than as a magnetic popular speaker. For 15 years, during the 80's and the 90's the great rivalry for Congressional honors between Mr. Erdman and the late Congressman, William H. Sowden, formed a matter of State interest. Having served his country as District Attorney and County solicitor for many years, he was in 1892 elected to Congress, from the Berks-Lehigh district, and re-elected in 1894. He became noted for two things, first his great friendship with Speaker Thomas Brackett Reed, and also for his persistent objections to private pension grants.

A staunch Democrat, Mr. Erdman was thoroughly versed in the history of his party, and all its principles and tenets, and he could apply to any political situation the soundest logic in line with Democratic doctrine.
